This position requires the support and application, where applicable, of the 5 Distinct Educational Features of Columbia College.

As will be noted in reviewing the list of roles and responsibilities below, it consists of two distinct parts. First is a set of generic roles and responsibilities. This is followed by a list of specific roles and responsibilities

The generic roles and responsibilities are included in every position description at the College. The specific roles and responsibilities are specific to this position. Employees are expected to conduct themselves in a manner commensurate with their roles and responsibilities that follow. Employee performance reviews will be based on these roles and responsibilities.

Employees are expected to conduct themselves in a manner commensurate with their roles and responsibilities that follow. Employee performance reviews will be based on these roles and responsibilities.

Our facilitators are encouraged to do all they can to help each individual student succeed. We believe that when our students succeed, we succeed. Therefore, the focus of our facilitators is to help our students to learn rather than to lecture to them.

The College's current student attrition rate is one-quarter that of traditional colleges and universities. At the same time our graduate employers are very satisfied. Employment rates of graduates normally exceed 90% and our rate is one of the highest among all colleges and universities in Alberta. We want to continue to create a win-win situation where the employer, student, facilitator and College all succeed.

Columbia's goal in education is to produce graduates who are rated by employers as above average to excellent performers in their field of training.

All responsibilities below will be carried out under the general direction and supervision of your supervisor. In consideration of this, the individual will:

PROFESSIONAL BEHAVIOUR

The first two groups of individuals to be recognized as professionals were doctors and lawyers. To become a member of one of these notable groups, in the past, an individual had to be trained (on-the-job) by one or more mentors who were already a member of the profession. Each profession required its new members to adopt a group of professional behaviours. These included such behaviours as abiding by the laws of the land and being honest, moral, and ethical. Members were also expected to help fellow members and to help those outside their profession who sought their service (i.e. patients and clients).

Over the last two hundred years several other groups of individuals adopted similar codes of conduct. In the last fifty years, a large number of leadership, management, business, and professional/personal development books have added both breadth and depth to this group of behaviours. However, rather than describing these behaviours as belonging to a certain group, they ascribe them to 'all individuals' working in an organization from data entry clerk to director. These writers believe such behaviours are essential to the success of each individual in the organization. They further believe these behaviours are essential to the success of the organization itself.

The following list of professional behaviours are drawn from the above sources. They are provided to help ensure that 'all' members of the organization, regardless of their education, position, or title, are aware of the behaviours they should demonstrate as professionals. The more effective each individual demonstrates these behaviours, the more successful they will become as respected and valued professionals within the organization.

Further, the more actively and collaboratively each individual engages with other professionals, within the organization, the more successful the organization will become. And the more success the organization achieves, the more job security each professional will have.
